University of Dayton will take part in a nation-wide survey of the placement and vocational expectations of women college graduates of 1956, it was announced Saturday.

R. Kathleen Whetro, dean of women at UD, has been appointed by university officials to conduct the UD portion of the survey for the sponsoring women's section of the National Vocation Guidance association.

UD's 90 women graduates of June, 1956, will be queried in the local survey, which forms a part of the third in a projected five-year series of such surveys being conducted in cooperation with the women's bureau of the U.S. department of labor.

This is UD's first participation in the survey, which, according to Miss Whetro, "promises to be valuable in educational planning, particularly to the 161 colleges and universities participating in it."

Information to be sought in the survey will concern job opportunities for women, trends in salary levels and responsibilities, and women's interest in jobs.
